Big Data Analytics for Industrial Process Control

Today, in modern factories, each step in manufacturing produces a bulk of valuable as well as highly precise information. This provides a great opportunity for understanding the hidden statistical dependencies in the process. Systematic analysis and utilization of advanced analytical methods can lead towards more informed decisions. In this article we discuss some of the challenges related to big data analysis in manufacturing and relevant solutions to some of these challenges.